Bio of Guest Speaker

Tyler Budge is an artist who works primarily in sculpture, site-specific installation, kinetics and video projection. His works reference metaphors represented by objects or images to autobiographically address personal experience. Recent areas of investigation include: infertility, site displacement, reconciliation with self, and the constructs of gender. His art has been seen in numerous exhibitions nationwide.

Budge continually questions the meaning of making, the role of art in society and its power to create change in the self and/or community. As an Associate Teaching Professor at UWT, he encourages his students to connect their artistic practice to their local community, and current social issues.
